COFFEE KIDS ADDS STAFF AND BOARD MEMBERS

(Santa Fe, N.M.) – Coffee Kids, a Santa Fe-based non-profit dedicated to improving the lives of coffee-farming families, announces the addition of three staff members and two board members.

Nancy Sulzberg joins Coffee Kids as administrative manager. Sulzberg previously worked for Open Hands, a Santa Fe-based, non-profit. Sulzberg holds a masters degree in education from Seton Hall University and brings 30 years of experience in non-profits/social services to her role at Coffee Kids.

Joseph Apodaca joins Coffee Kids as membership assistant. Apodaca previously worked as the assistant to the director at the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, a museum and scholarly institute dedicated to ancient Near East research.

José Carlos León Vargas joins Coffee Kids Oaxaca, Mexico office as international programs coordinator. León Vargas holds a master's degree in international development from the University of Pavia in Italy, and has experience working for social change in Ecuador, Italy and various parts of Asia.

Coffee Kids is also proud to announce the addition of two board members. Karen Cebreros is president and founder of Elan Organics, a San Diego-based coffee importer. Elizabeth Whitlow-Inman works for the California Certified Organic Farmers as a trainer, regional representative and inspector. She has also served on various committees with the Specialty Coffee Association of America.
